THE DATA

$413K

Median Home Price

Denver's median home price has surged in Q2 2026.

The rise in home prices is partly driven by tech-driven growth and remote work flexibility, attracting a diverse population to the area.

01

AI Enhances Market Efficiency

The new AI-powered platform automates tasks like property valuation and market analysis, significantly reducing time and costs for both buyers and sellers.

02

Competitive Market Remains Tight

Despite the AI revolution, Denver's real estate market remains competitive with tight inventory levels. This suggests that supply has not kept pace with demand, driving up prices.
