THE DATA

31

Junior Colleges (2022)

Los Angeles County hosts the highest number of junior colleges among all U.S. counties.

This concentration reflects a strategic investment in accessible higher education infrastructure, particularly in urban, high-density regions. The presence of 31 junior colleges in a single county suggests a deliberate, decentralized model for workforce readiness and credentialing — one that predates and may now be accelerating AI integration in vocational and technical training.

01

AI Access Begins at the Ground Level

This model demonstrates that AI in higher education isn't just about elite research labs — it's also about creating pathways for underrepresented populations to gain AI-relevant skills through accessible, community-based institutions.

02

The Hidden AI Infrastructure Map

This suggests that future AI policy should not only fund research universities but also embed AI literacy and ethics into community college curricula — ensuring that innovation is both inclusive and sustainable.
