THE DATA

35,483

Population (2024)

Hutto is now the most populous city in Williamson County, surpassing Taylor and Brushy Creek.

This figure, drawn from the 2024 American Community Survey 5-Year Estimates, reflects a sustained demographic shift. Hutto's growth is not a temporary spike but a structural transformation driven by industrial expansion, housing development, and infrastructure investment. Its rise signals a decentralization of Williamson County's urban core away from traditional hubs like Taylor and toward the eastern corridor.

01

Hutto's Growth Is Infrastructure-Driven

This industrial momentum, combined with new housing and transportation corridors, is creating a self-reinforcing cycle of demand. As the Megasite moves toward approval, Hutto is becoming a destination for both workers and investors seeking proximity to I-35 and State Highway 45.

02

A New Urban Center Emerges

Hutto's rise as the largest city in Williamson County marks a shift from a geographic hierarchy centered on Georgetown to a multi-core urban model. This decentralization reduces pressure on Austin's core while creating a new economic and demographic axis. The city's ability to attract industrial investment and support it with expanding public services—such as the proposed city-run fire department—demonstrates a new level of institutional maturity for a rapidly growing community.
