THE DATA

93

the district's overall accountability score

Thrall ISD earned the highest score among all Williamson County school districts in the 2025–26 school year.

This score reflects performance across academic achievement, student growth, and graduation rates, as measured by the Texas Education Agency. Thrall ISD's 93 is not just a top mark—it's the only district in the county to surpass 90.

01

Size Doesn't Define Excellence

Thrall ISD serves just over 1,000 students—far fewer than Round Rock or Leander. Yet it outperforms them all in accountability. This shows that resource allocation and strategic focus matter more than district size or budget scale. Smaller districts can achieve elite results with precision and cohesion.

02

The Equity Paradox in Education

In Williamson County, districts with higher median home values—like Round Rock and Cedar Park—do not consistently rank higher. Thrall's top score challenges the assumption that affluent communities automatically deliver superior education. It suggests that policy, teacher retention, and local governance may be more influential than wealth alone.
