Population (2024)

Daphne is the most populous city in Baldwin County, outpacing all others in the region.

This population figure reflects Daphne's growing role as the county's demographic and civic anchor. As the largest city in the Baldwin County metro area, it hosts the highest concentration of residents, shaping local infrastructure, services, and economic activity. The city's size positions it uniquely to influence regional planning and investment decisions.

01

Population Drives Economic Momentum

Daphne's population size is not just a number — it's a foundation for sustained economic growth. Larger resident bases attract commercial development, increase demand for housing, and support public services. In Baldwin County, where migration and tourism drive real estate demand, Daphne's scale provides a stable base for long-term investment. This demographic weight makes it a natural hub for civic and business activity.

Scale Enables Regional Resilience

Daphne's population density offers a competitive advantage in market resilience. While smaller communities like Orange Beach or Robertsedale face volatility from tourism and short-term rentals, Daphne's larger, more diversified population base buffers against seasonal fluctuations. Its size supports a broader tax base and sustained public services, making it a more stable long-term market for both homeowners and investors.
